CAMPBELL & M'DERMOT EDITORS AND PROPRIETORS.

FRIDAY MORNING, AUGUST 11. EXPERIENCE shows that disease, like empire, slways pursues a Westward whereas the tax being so high as to precourse. All the great epidemics that have afflicted the human race originated among the dense, low fed, and filthy populations of the East, and have extended westward until checked by cling a revenue of $8,000 per day, and the mate influences. The course of cholers, which excites scarcely so much alarm, which excites scarcely so much alarm, or rather preparation, as it should, illustrates this law. It originated among the half-starved workmen on the Suez Canal, who were huddled together by thousands under circumstances that would naturally engender disease. It has spread Westward steadily. We hear of its being successively at Jerusalem and Constantinople, and we may anticipate its speedy appearance in violation of the law to every twenty-

Later news dispels the reports of the mild character of the disease. At Alexandria and Cairo, respectively, the mortality was a thousand a day, with a proportionate fatality in the intermediate towns, The population was terrorstricken, and all that could were fleeing from the country. In Syria, the disformation of the misery and the more, to say nothing of the misery and we entailed on widows, orphans, wives and families by brutal, drunken husbands and fathers. Thus we find, in order to gain from the manufacture of whisky $8,000, it will cost the people at a fair low estimate, $16,028,000; is it not high time then for the people to begin to make proper calculations. gin to make proper calculations. Respectfully submitted by ease had not yet assumed an aggravated form, but all the indications pointed to the worst results of former epidemics.

The intelligence that our Government has ordered General Sheridan to make a reduction of his forces as rapidly as he can, takes the wind out of the sails of those alarmists who have been asserting that we were going to plunge into war with Maximilian, and drive him pell-mell out of Mexico. It was a gross abuse of confidence in the gentlemen who held a meeting in New York last week, to read in public a portion of a private letter of General Sheridan. he can, takes the wind out of the salls of those alarmists who have been asserting that we were going to plunge into war with Maximilian, and drived him pell-mell out of Mexico. It was a gross abuse of confidence in the gentlemen who held a meeting in New York last week, to read in public a portion of a private letter of General Sheridan. He has a perfect right to cherish the views therein expressed and to communicate them to his friends. But they had no right without his permission to make such use of his letter that his words would be telegraphed all over the land. However sincerely he may believe that Maximilian ought to be driven out of Mexico, he knows his place as a military officer, and will take can not to cause any needless imbrogics between his men and the French cor others have cherished, that our large force in Texas was to be sent across the Rio Grande. Already the State Department has received a warning from our Consul at Port Mahon, the first stopping place in the Mediterranean of Eastern travel, of the appearance of the scourge in that place, in spite of the stringent quarantine regulations adopted.

Later news dispels the reports of the mild character of the disease. At Alex—

Out of the chirty-one persons elected to office in Richmond last week, there were not much, if any, over half a dozen who were either active or passive secessionists before the war. An overwhelming majority of those successful candidates were, on the contrary, energetic and ardent Union men, who sustained the Union cause and voted for Union candidates, without any "variableness or shadow of turning," until after the commencement of hostilities between the two sections. And after that, as did almost everybody else, under fifty years of age, they went into the military service of the Confederacy, and discharged their duty as became soldischarged their duty
